Safety Forum: OSHA Crystalline Silica Rule

Speaker: Mark E. Hasting, CIH, CSP, LSRP, PMP, Director, Whitman

OSHA has also recently enacted rules around exposure to silica dust and implemented a new measure that reduces the allowed exposure to silica. The rule also requires companies to record worker exposure to silica and provide medical exams for exposed workers.

Part of the new rule is a national emphasis by OSHA to have a minimum 2% of their inspections be for crystalline silica. OSHA recently performed one of these inspections and proposed a penalty of nearly $89,000 to an employer in New Jersey whom OSHA deemed provided inadequate protections to their workers.
