ARC will be providing a high-level overview of how companies are utilizing drones in construction to find actionable intelligence on your projects regardless of where it is in the design-build lifecycle. From 3D laser scanning to volumetric material measurements to identifying safety hazards, the advancements in sensor technology have created many use cases for drones in modern construction. We will be reviewing the relevant applications for the various types of drone sensors available today while also showing real world examples of those sensors in everyday jobsite scenarios. We will also have a drone onsite to fly the property (weather permitting) and show the photo and video capture process.
